

Jessica Crow

Nationality: Canadian/American

Languages: English & French (Fluent)

Jessica Crow is an independent arbitrator and an academic at the University of Cambridge. She specialises in energy and natural resources, climate change and the environment, international dispute resolution, and public international law.

Jessica has served as Arbitrator and Counsel in complex, high-value disputes across numerous industries including energy, construction, infrastructure, insurance (including political risk insurance), telecommunications, fintech, transportation, joint ventures, and commercial matters. With fifteen years of experience in international commercial and investment arbitration, she has been engaged under most major arbitral institutions and across multiple governing laws and seats.

Jessica is widely recognised for her expertise in the law and governance of the energy transition, climate change, and environmental matters. Her work is underpinned by deep knowledge of international climate policy frameworks, emissions trading regimes, and renewable energy regulation. Her practice includes advising corporates, investors, and governments on international and domestic climate policy, ESG frameworks, and political and climate-related dispute risk. She writes and speaks extensively on these topics.

As a Fellow at the World Economic Forum, Jessica engages with global business leaders, policymakers, and international organizations on the climate governance agenda. She contributes to high-level stakeholder consultations on corporate climate ambition, transition risk and achieving net zero.

At the University of Cambridge, Jessica teaches international dispute resolution, climate law, and environmental policy and is a researcher in climate litigation at the Cambridge Centre for Environment, Energy, and Natural Resource Governance (CEENRG). She holds appointments as the Hoffmann Fellow in Global Climate Governance at the Centre for Climate Engagement, Hughes Hall and as a researcher at the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law.

Before becoming a full-time arbitrator and academic, Jessica worked in private practice at leading global firms in London and Paris, acting as counsel for corporates, states, and state-owned entities in international commercial and investment arbitration. Additionally, she has in-house experience with an Engineering Procurement and Construction (EPC) company in the energy sector and served as a Special Legislative Assistant to the government house leader in the Parliament of Ontario, Canada.

She speaks fluent English and French, and is admitted to practice in New York and as a solicitor in England and Wales.

Sector Expertise

- Energy, Oil & Gas

- Construction, Engineering & Infrastructure
- Environment, Renewables & Climate Change
- Commercial Dispute Resolution

Energy, Oil & Gas

Jessica has experience in disputes in the Energy sector, Oil & Gas, including midstream transportation and pipeline agreements. As in-house counsel to a prominent EPC company in Milan, she focused on projects and disputes in the midstream sector both on and offshore. She is knowledgeable in upstream granting instruments, exploration and production, construction, operation and decommissioning, as well as stakeholder issues, including indigenous rights, social licencing, local content and the environment.

Construction, Engineering & Infrastructure

Jessica has experience as counsel and arbitrator in construction and engineering disputes involving nuclear energy facilities, offshore pipelay, pipelaying vessels, sustainable smart cities, urban rail and complex industrial facilities. She has experience dealing with issues of delay, disruption, prolongation, liquidated damages, misrepresentation and negligence.

Environment, Renewables & Climate Change

Jessica has deep expertise in the law and governance of the energy transition, climate change and environmental law. She has experience advising governments, corporates, and other key stakeholders on climate litigation risk and ESG matters. She is familiar with the workings of the international climate change regime, including the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), the Paris Agreement and the complex interactions between international investment and the environment in public international law. She is knowledgeable in renewable energy incentives and support policies including Green Credits (GCs) and feed-in-tariffs (FITs); market mechanisms, such as emissions trading schemes (ETS), and the commercial and investment implications of decarbonization policies. She teaches international law, climate change and environmental law at the University of Cambridge where she is a doctoral researcher.

Commercial Dispute Resolution

Jessica has considerable experience in commercial disputes across a range of industry sectors, including energy, construction, joint ventures, industrial chemicals, financial services, digital assets, telecommunications, intellectual property and commercial agency.
